

In today's world, we don't know where our food is coming from, how it is produced and what has been added to it. With the climate changing faster than anticipated and the unpreparedness of farming sector, food scarcity will be a huge problem, especially in our cities where the food has to travel long miles before it reaches our homes.

veggyBARREL® offers the ability to grow tons of fresh veggies, herbs, fruits & more. Soil nourishment happens by the food waste fed in the central feed pipe containing earthworms. The central pipe allows the worms to travel back and forth in to the entire structure. The continuous movement of the worms in the composting pipe and around the container distributes healthy worm manure and creates channels for steady aeration through out the soil. Through this process the soil is renewed continuously.

TRADITIONAL GARDENING,

- is labor intensive and difficult for seniors, typically requiring soil preparation, tilling and weeding.
- is slow due to restricted availability of water and nutrients, food grows at a conventional pace.
- is water wasting. Significant amount of water is required due to evaporation and drainage in to the earth below the plant roots.
